Dr. Sovak said in his defence that the present state of affairs in his married life was "inevitable." He said Mrs. Sovak was too much concerned with "her beauty and figure." and was not averse to flirtations. The physician declared that Mrs. Sovak refused to push their baby carriage because it was mental work. "In fact," said Dr. Sovak, "she was constantly complaining because she had the child."

Justice Platzek granted to Mrs. Sovak $150 a month alimony, pending the determination of the action, and $500 counsel fees.

SOUTHERN WINTER RESORTS

Simplicity and elegance in the styling of women's and misses' fashions is elusive, indefinable; it is sensed rather than seen. A high degree of discrimination is necessary to create and evolve fashions. Expression, repression, accentuation and restraint must be counted in designing. A fine understanding of this Art is evident in the Southern apparel presented by this shop. Every individual piece bears those touches of refinement, those dainty graces of execution, those elegancies of detail and finesse which make for atmosphere and fitness.
